

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE on Vocational Education and Training (ICVET 2011)

THE ROLES OF VOCATIONAL EDUCATION IN THE PREPARATION OF PROFESSIONAL LABOR FORCE

Saphir Hotel, 9 July 2011

Yogyakarta State University
Indonesia

Background

Development around sustainability and labor professionalism in the past decade changed our approaches and thinking in radical and inclusive ways. Sustainable strategies include the flexibility offered by three aspects of vocational education: human resources, organization, and financing/infrastructure. Smart combination of these three aspects in learning is one of the important factors leading to a more sustainable vocational education that is relevant to the work field as well.

The visualization of natural relationships between sustainability and vocational education could be found in many contexts. The sustainability in creating professional labor force is achieved through relevant organizational and pedagogic perspectives, good character building, and adequate financing/infrastructure that can contribute positively to the global changes. These changes, especially in technology, urge us to provide graduates who have good character and relevant competency to face them in the work field.

The aim of the 2011 ICVET conference is to highlight different ways and approaches, in order to integrate better concepts of human resource, organization, and financing/infrastructure within the role of vocational education in the preparation of professional labor force in its widest sense. International and national experts, researchers, practitioners, teachers, and people who are interested in the issue are welcomed to participate in the conference.
