Introduction

The UNEVOC Network sub-regional consultation meeting on Building Capacity for TVET and ESD in the Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) will be organized by the UNESCO-UNEVOC International Centre and InWEnt Capacity Building International with the cooperation of the UNESCO Moscow Cluster Office in Bonn, Germany.

Following on the outcomes of the World Conference on ESD held in Bonn in 2009 and XVI-th CIS Ministers of Education Conference held in Minsk in 2009, the meeting will be designed to explore ways to further UNEVOC Network's involvement and commitment in ESD development and implementation with a view to increasing both the quality and the relevance of TVET, particularly in CIS countries.

In particular, the meeting intends to increase the effectiveness of the UNEVOC Network in CIS countries, thereby contributing to the good profile and visibility of UNEVOC Centres as a driver of development effectiveness. The meeting concerns with the efficient implementation of the Second Half of the United Nations Decade of Education for Sustainable Development (UNDESD, 2005-2014), the main focus is thus to foster regional cooperation as well as bilateral and trilateral institutional cooperation between national education ministries in CIS countries.

UNESCO-UNEVOC and its partners plan to use the outcomes of the meeting to help develop guidelines, briefing materials and prototype capacity building programmes that can be used to strengthen the contributions of the UNEVOC Global Network for meeting the overall goal of the UNESCO Strategy for the Second Half of the UNDESD which spans from 2010 to 2015.

Background

While UNESCO puts higher emphasis on achieving Education for All (EFA), the overall goal of the UNESCO Strategy for the Second Half of the DESD is to support Member States and other stakeholders in addressing global sustainable development challenges through ESD, thus addressing the challenges of learning for bringing about a more sustainable world (UNESCO, March 2010)¹. The strategy, in particular, gives special emphasis to the significance of education for the global development agenda and underlines the essential contribution of ESD to shaping the purpose, content and quality of all educations including TVET.

In light of this, education for sustainable development is setting a new direction for TVET². The outcomes of different regional seminars and international experts consultations on ESD held in the past few years also impel that TVET should be based on values, principles and practices necessary to respond effectively to current and future challenges. However, the complexity, breadth and diversity of TVET increasingly requires that those involved in decision-making, planning, research and the development of TVET in pursuit of ESD be aware of worldwide developments, and of solutions that are innovative, transferable and/or adaptable.

In line with UNESCO education policies and strategic plans, UNESCO-UNEVOC, as UNESCO's specialist centre for TVET, supports the development of human resources involved in these processes through a range of modalities such as national or regional cooperation, capacity building in planning, knowledge sharing, research and development, and by utilising the UNEVOC Network.

The UNEVOC Network (as at the beginning of 2010) links 280 national UNEVOC Centres that are maintained by 166 of its Member States. The global network is composed of national institutions active in the fields of planning, research, development and delivery of TVET which represent a broad range of profiles and strengths. UNESCO-UNEVOC assists UNEVOC Network Centres in the promotion of the UNEVOC Network. Referring to this meeting, UNEVOC Network became a platform for close cooperation and exchange experiences for all states in the post-Soviet area in order to enhance the role of TVET in the CIS Member States³. The CIS UNEVOC Network which consists of 13 UNEVOC Centres orchestrates activities to mobilise the UNEVOC Network to achieve the purpose for which it has been established. Various actions have been taken to continuously strengthen and upgrade the Network of UNEVOC Centres through a range of means⁴,

As UNESCO's work is increasingly focussing on activities at country-level, the UNEVOC Centres gain importance as national partners of UNESCO-UNEVOC and as multipliers and disseminators of the UNESCO's efforts at country-level. Given the diversity among the Centres, the accent is not only on expanding networks but also on enhancing the role and effectiveness in mutual engagement that aims to develop and share knowledge, and create resources for the development of suitable, relevant and quality of TVET. As such, the networks constitute a unique platform on which UNESCO can pursue its new integrated approach to further heighten South-South and North-South-South cooperation as a key delivery modality for advancing progress towards EFA.

Specifically, as interest grows in sustainable development, there is increasing need for sharing innovative practices and experiences in the field amongst practitioners and policy experts alike. Demand is expected to grow for new and innovative learning resources for TVET, and these will be expanded and current good practice need to be reviewed.

³ The Commonwealth of Independent States (CIS) consists of 12 former Soviet Republics that differ in their membership status. As of September 2008, 9 countries have ratified the CIS charter and are full CIS members (Armenia, Azerbaijan, Belarus, Moldova, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Russia, Tajikistan, Uzbekistan), one country (Turkmenistan) is an associate member, one country (Georgia) has declared its decision to leave the CIS, and one country (Ukraine) is a founding and participating country, but legally not a member country.

Details on these and the profile of the UNEVOC Centres can be found in the online UNEVOC Network database at www.unevoc.unesco.org/network.

In accordance with the UNESCO Strategy on TVET Development (2010-2015), the capacities of UNEVOC networks will continue to be harnessed for the furtherance of achieving quality TVET towards sustainable development. To be inline with the UNESCO Strategy for the Second Half of the UNDESD, UNESCO-UNEVOC will strive to stimulate fresh initiatives, promote new forms of cooperation, enhance the availability and dissemination of good and innovative practices in ESD and place strong emphasis on enhancing partnerships in ESD to better mobilise and engage with key stakeholder groups. Together, these strategies will maintain UNESCO-UNEVOC's strong emphasis on TVET in order to bring about sustainable development during the Second Half of the Decade.

Programme aims and objectives

The UNEVOC Network sub-regional consultation meeting aims to support the UNEVOC Centres in CIS countries in addressing global sustainable development challenges through ESD and TVET. Taking into account regional specificities, challenges and priorities, the meeting will provide opportunities for participants to discuss about the broad and inclusive concept of ESD and its initiatives in order to integrate it into TVET curricula, learning materials and activities.

In this light, the programme will:

- review current trends, international discourse and potential of TVET contributions in addressing global sustainable development challenges;
- comprehend country perspective of ESD-related best practices and innovations in enhancing the quality of TVET;
- formulate programme directives and strategies for ensuring an efficient implementation of the DESD through UNEVOC Network;
- clarify the respective roles and responsibilities of UNEVOC Centres in enhancing scientific excellence, research and ESD-related knowledge development and innovations in TVET for the Second Half of the DESD;
- facilitate South-South and North-South-South cooperation, partnerships among UNEVOC Centres.

Participants

The meeting will be attended by national coordinators and representatives of the UNEVOC Centres mainly from CIS countries, and international and national experts representing national policy makers, researchers, curriculum planners and teacher educators, TVET institutions.

Structure of the presentations

Participants are expected to prepare case studies focusing on the re-orientation of TVET towards sustainable development in their respective countries. Each case study should:

- 1. outline, and illustrate with examples, the different ways in which TVET is seen as contributing to ESD development and implementation.
- 2. demonstrate issues and concerns with regard to those contributions.
- 3. provide recommendations to strengthen and extend those contributions.

Expected Outcomes

- introduced the UNESCO Strategy for the Second Half of the UNDESD to the UNEVOC Network members,
- 2. identified key regional challenges, opportunities, and key areas for strategic action for the Second Half of the DESD,
- 3. capacity built, profile and visibility increased, ESD –related knowledge shared and discussed among CIS UNEVOC Centres,
- 4. engaged with the other UNEVOC Centres outside of the CIS region and shared experience and practices, and strengthened partnerships,
- 5. discussed ways how to create a sub-regional network for Russian speaking countries to foster regional cooperation as well as bilateral and trilateral institutional cooperation between national education ministries,
- 6. Actualized the work of the national UNEVOC Centers in CIS to implement the UNESCO Strategy on TVET Development (2010-2015).
